Every year fewer people speak English as their mother tongue – but more people speak it as a second or foreign language. In 1950 nearly 9% of the world's population spoke English as their first language. By 2050 the proportion will have dropped to just over 5%. Chinese is spoken by more speakers than any other language and the numbers of speakers of Spanish, Hindi and Arabic are increasing rapidly. During next few years English will become a language mainly spoken by bilingual and multilingual people. It is estimated that 75% of the world's mail is in English and 60% of the world's telephone calls. English is spoken practically all over the world. It is spoken as the mother tongue in Great Britain, the United States of America, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. An England's history helps to understand the present condition of English. Many English words were borrowed from the languages of Angles and Saxons.
